The Program on Law and State Government Fellowships

The Program on Law and State Government (PLSG) Fellowships provide a unique opportunity for law students interested in contributing to the contemporary scholarship of legal issues facing state governments. Awarded annually on a competitive basis, the fellowships enable two students to work with Director Cynthia Baker to explore an issue of the students' choosing by hosting an academic event and developing scholarship on that topic. This symposium, addressing public entrepreneurship and state government, presents the culmination of the ideas, research, and work of the 2010 PLSG Fellows, Erin Albert and Melissa Stuart. Past fellowship topics include: state law and energy policy, education reform, religious expression in the public sphere, ethics of public service, administrative adjudication, charter school law, state regulation and funding of elections, the internet's impact on state tax systems, and state governments' role in addressing public health concerns.

For more information about the Program on Law and State Government at the IU School of Law-Indianapolis, contact the program's director, Cynthia Baker, at 317-278-2357 or e-mail cabaker@iupui.edu.

10th Annual PLSG Fellowship Symposium: Public Entrepreneurship in State Government

Inviting the opportunity to reexamine the role of government, public entrepreneurship is particularly concerned with increasing government's capacity to respond to issues of quality of life. The innovative approaches taken by certain municipalities to addressing major issues such as affordable housing, recreation and open space, land use planning, and poverty show an entrepreneurial spirit at work.

The 2010 Program on Law and State Government Fellows will examine innovative business models used by state governments in providing public services. Following an assessment of state governments' current systems, the Fellows will identify successful, real-world examples of service coordination and delivery from Indiana and other states. Examples such as privatization, revenue generation beyond taxation, and social entrepreneurship will be explored. State governments' use, or potential to benefit from modern research, including intrinsic motivation and commons research will also be examined. A broad range of government efforts toward service delivery, from providing services to children with disabilities to education to judicial reform, will be considered. Additionally, the Fellows will consider what changes to Indiana laws and procedures at each level of government would be needed to move toward more successful models for providing public services.
